THE PERFECT JOB?

What would you choose as the perfect job? Here are three that could be on your list!

MOVIE MADNESS

For all big film fans out there, this is THE dream job. Most people pay to watch films, but in this job, YOU are paid to watch TV series and films. Around 30 people are employed by Netflix to watch Netflix content. They are required to binge-watch the latest films and TV series on the platform and 'tag' them with a few words. So, how does that work and why is it done? Words to describe each film or TV series are entered into the system. This is done so that Netflix users can search for content more easily. For example, in the sci-fi category, the tags include future and planets. The release date of the film, the language, the director and actors in the film are also included.

How do you become a Netflix tagger? Well, first you need to have worked in the film or TV industry for five years. You also need to specialise in a film category, for example, comedy, horror or teen movies. Then there is a very difficult interview for the job. All Netflix taggers must have an excellent knowledge of film and TV.

ONLY DAREDEVILS NEED APPLY

Are you scared of heights? Then this is not the job for you. But if you are very brave and love rock climbing, then cleaning the windows of really tall skyscrapers is the perfect job for you. There is some on-the-job training to clean the windows: the cleaners are taught to abseil down from the top of the buildings. That means they move down the outside of the windows held by a rope around their bodies.

Imagine cleaning the windows of the famous London Gherkin! It's 180 metres tall and 40 storeys high. It was designed by a very famous English architect and it was built in the 2000s. Cleaners abseil down to the 35th floor. Below the 35th floor, the cleaners can work in a traditional cradle.

It takes nine or ten days to clean the whole building. Cleaners don't work on days when the winds are too strong. And guess what? The Gherkin is cleaned with soap and water.

Where do the cleaners go for lunch? Well, lunch breaks aren't taken in a café. They are taken sitting at the top of the 40-storey building. Imagine that amazing view every day.

PET PSYCHOLOGIST

If you love animals, this could be the dream job for you. The pay is good, too. You can earn between £25,000 and £50,000 per year. The job is to study animal behaviour and help owners discover the causes of their pets' problems. To work as a pet psychologist, you need to have a degree in veterinary science or zoology. You also need experience of working with animals, for example at a vet's or at a zoo.

So, how is the job done? First, they talk to the owner to find out about the problem with the pet. For example, it may run after cars or bark too loudly. Then the animal is observed by the psychologist, and afterwards, once the pet psychologist discovers the causes of the pet's problems, the owners are given advice about how to help their pets.

Read the texts and answer the questions.

31. What knowledge should a Netflix stagger have?
32. If you want to work as a window cleaner, what kind of person should you be?
33. What do you need to study to become a pet psychologist?
34. Which career has the highest salary? Why?
35. Which of these 3 careers would you choose and why?

Part IV: Unseen Reading 5 itemsItems 36-40: Read the article and answer. (5 Marks)*Asian

Asian carp were introduced to American waters during the 1970s. Southern fish farmers began importing them to help clean their ponds. Asian carp are phenomenal cleaners. Unfortunately, it didn't take too long for them to escape from these ponds, perhaps from flooding, and get into the Mississippi River. From there they have followed their natural tendency to swim upstream. This tendency may lead them into the Great Lakes and Canada, a nightmare scenario for fisherman.

Asian carp are large fish. One species, the silver carp, can grow to be 100 pounds. But despite their size, they feed from the bottom of the food chain. That means that they eat plankton and algae. A one-hundred-pound fish can eat an awful lot of sea scum, and some of it is toxic. The carp are resistant to the toxins, but we aren't. Some Asian carp are hazardous to eat because they have so many algal toxins in their systems. They also have lots of tiny bones in their meat, which makes them difficult to prepare. Asian carp is not a popular delicacy.

Introducing the Asian carp into waters that have not known them can be devastating. Beneath the surface of the water is a unique ecosystem. This system rests delicately on a balance that has evolved over millions of years. Then along come these big, hungry bottom feeders to mess up everything. They breed rapidly and densely populated the waters. Worse still, they compete with the native bottom feeders. The native bottom feeders are smaller. Larger, tastier fish like salmon eat them. The native bottom feeders are an important part of the ecosystem. When the Asian carp outperforms them, the whole food chain suffers, all the way up to the people.

Not only do Asian carp mess up the food chain, they mess up people. Seriously. An Asian carp will bust you in head. Remember that silver carp can be 100 pounds. There is a reason why they are also known as "flying carp." This particular species of Asian carp has a tendency to jump when frightened. They can jump up to ten feet in the air, and the sound of boat motors frightens them. Watch out watersportists! In 2003 a woman jetskier collided with one and broke her nose and a vertebra. She almost drowned. In 2008 a teenager broke his jaw on one while tubing. Many others have been injured by these flying logs. Asian carp pose a serious threat to water skiers and boaters.

In 2007 the U.S. Department of the Interior declared all silver carp to be an injurious species. In 2010, the State of Michigan passed the $30 million CARPACT. In 2012 Congress approved the "Stop Invasive Species" act, legislation written solely to protect the Great Lakes from Asian carp. The government has been on the offensive against these large-bellied invaders.

But Asian carp are difficult to catch. Since they eat from the bottom, they do not go for lures or baits like most large fish. The best way to stop them is to keep them out. The Great Lakes are connected to the Mississippi River through the 28-mile Chicago Sanitary and Ship Canal. For Chicagoans, it is the final point of resistance.

Answer the questions in short answers.

36. What's the main purpose of bringing Asian carp in America by fish farmers?
37. Where were the Asian carps swimming to?
38. Why is Asian carp unpopular?
39. Who would be most threatened by silver carp in a local water source?
40. What is the best way to get rid of Asian carp?
